

Mind Matters Counselling Copyright Notice

Ownership of copyright

The contents of this website are subject to copyright held by Mind Matters Counselling. We hold the copyright to all content featured on this website. You must not use, edit, distribute or copy our website or any of its content without first obtaining written permission. For more information about our copyright licence, see below.

Copyright licence - Mind Matters Counselling

Mind Matters Counselling holds the copyright to all aspects of this website. We are happy to grant users permission to view our website on their computers and mobile devices and allow them to copy and store our website on their web browser caches. You are also free to print off pages from our website for personal and non-commercial use.

All other rights are reserved. You must not use our website or content without first obtaining written permission. This includes but is not limited to adapting, editing, changing, adding to, publishing and distributing the Mind Matters Counselling website or any of its content without first obtaining written permission.

How to obtain written permission to use our website and content

If you would like to use our website or any of our copyrighted materials and content, you will need to write to us requesting permission. You can do this by either emailing us using the online form on our contact us page or writing to:

Mind Matters Counselling Services LLP.

28 Cheapside,

Wakefield,

West Yorkshire WF1 2TF

Mind Matters Counselling reserves the right to deny requests for permission.

If you would like to share or distribute our website or its content for the purpose of recommendation, then you are free to go ahead, providing that you include a link to our website.

Enforcement of copyright law

Mind Matters Counselling takes the protection of its copyrighted content very seriously. If it is found that someone has used our materials without asking our permission or providing a credited link, we reserve the right to begin legal proceedings.

Our first step will be to send a friendly notice to the webmaster or company, politely asking them to remove the copyrighted content from their website or publication. Providing action is taken to remove the content within a reasonable period of time, no further legal action will be taken against the company or individual.

If however we do not hear back from the individual or company and no action is taken, we will commence legal proceedings to seek monetary damages. Mind Matters Counselling will also seek an injunction from the courts to stop the individual or company from using our content. As well as paying monetary damages you may be required to cover all legal costs.

If you believe that you have seen our website, logo, images or any of our content on another website or publication (whether online or offline) please report it to us by using the online form on our contact us page or calling us on 0800 389 7320.

Infringing content or material

Mind Matters Counselling takes the copyright law very seriously and endeavours to make sure that all of the content used on our website is unique and created under our own copyright. If you believe that any of the content or materials on our website are infringing and breaching someone else's copyright, please report this to us by using the online contact form or phoning our office on 0800 389 7320 so we can remove the content and resolve the issue immediately.

Contact us

If you would like any more information about Mind Matters Counselling's copyright licence or any of the content featured on our website, please contact us by filling out the online form on our contact us page. Alternatively you can phone us on 0800 389 7320.

Thank you for taking the time to read our copyright notice.